Ness City Students Page for Senate President Steve Morris

TOPEKA – Senate President Steve Morris (R-Hugoton) last week welcomed two local students - Addison “Addie” Beutler and Nashon Copeland– as pages for the day in the Kansas Senate.

Senate President Morris said, “I enjoy having students visit the Capitol for the day. It is always interesting to hear their comments and to see the process through their eyes. Hopefully, they will remember this as a positive experience, and it will encourage them to get involved in government at some level when they are older. Perhaps one of them will run for office some day!”

Addie, 13, and Nashon, 12, are both students at Ness City Junior High School, USD 303.

Pages assist elected officials and staff by running errands, putting together mailings, and other necessary duties. Pages should be at least 12 years of age; each page is paid $3.00 for serving the legislature for a day.
